About Janry 1450. William Bruges Esq. first garter King of Arms,² rebuilt St George's Church, mostly at his own expense, and as to the shell, much in the same condition we now see it. This new Church consists of three small isles, & a chancel answering the nave or middle isle all which are leaded. At the west end of the nave is a small tower wherein hang four small bells, all modern. The antiquities were first, the portraits of St George, patron of the garter, with the founder and knights of that order, all ~~dedicated~~ delineated with their proper bearings, and surcoats in the choir or chancel windows. These paintings were done at the charge of the foresaid Mr Bruges. I have already set down the reason why I am of this opinion, under the 18.
Edward 3. "Between Landemar and Lord King Edward 3rd held a solenen feast at Windsor, in the end whereof he devised the order of the garter: Thomas Lord Adland (afterwards buried at Stanford) was one of those Knts first made. They were in all 26 companions whose pictures, with the sovereigns K. & patrons of S. G. were all of them afterwards set up in the chancel windows of St George's Church at Stanford, at the charge of Willm Bridges Esq. made first garter king of armes by H. 6th 3rd and buried afterwards in the said St George's Church at Stanford, and a great benefactor to the same.
There is now in the hands of that excellent antiquary John Antis Esq. Garter Principal King of Arms, a curious booke of drawings in folio, wherein the said Knights are all depicted in colours as they were first set up, with the title of the booke, in St George's Church at Stanford. I had once a sight of it by the favor of the now proprietor.
Of peculiar right Mr Antis told me that booke was once Mr.
Ashmole's. Be that as it will, the figures of the first Knights of the Garter as etched byollar on a brass plate, printed on a large sheet in Mr Ashmole's History of the garter were all copied from this booke.

From Peck's Antiquarian Annals of Stanford.

From Aschmole's order of the Garter Life of Bruges.

"In the Windows of this St George's Church at Stanford were formerly the Effigies of the first Founder of the Garter and of the Knights Companions in the time of this Bruges. Whereof that of the Sovereign and three others now remain.

From Aschmole's order of the Garter printed 1672. page 252.

Sir William Bruges was the first person created Garter. This Sir William Bruges became a great benefactor to St George's Church at Stanford, and in the Windows of the Church caused to be represented King Edward 3rd with his 25 first Knights Companions kneeling, habited in their Mantles and Surcoats of Arms, which upon my Journey thither anno 1664. I found so broken, and decayed that no tolerable draught of them could be taken, fit to exhibit to the reader's satisfaction. (This proves that Aschmole would have given prints in his Book taken from the Windows, had it been possible for him to have done it.)

About 1349. The order of the Garter was first instituted. Sir William Bruges died in 1449. but 100 Years after, that there is a great probability of most of them being taken from Original Paintings then in being - and perhaps some of the Knights might be then living when these drawings were made, as it does not say how many years before Sir W^m Bruges died, these were drawn. At least these drawings must have been made very near, if not quite 350 Years.

7 Draughts or the Effigies of the first Knights or Founders of the Order of the Garter:

Depicted, as appears by a Title in a later hand, in order to be set up in the Church of Stamford at the costs of S^r W^m Bruges (the first Garter King of Arms) who by his will gave several Legacies to the Church of S^t George in that Town and to the Chapells of Our Lady and of Saint George within the said Church.

In this Manuscript the Succession of the Knights in each Stall is continued, which makes it very valuable, and probably there cannot be found any other Book of this nature of that Age and Authority: This Bruges died before the 20th of March 1449 when his will was proved, so that the Names of Knights elected after that time were added by another hand, as is evident from the difference of the Ink, the Writing & drawing of the Arms.
